View & Opinion

Looking at the CPI realizations for September, the perception is that no significant decrease was observed in the monthly trend of inflation, which has somewhat postponed interest rate cut expectations. We still keep our expectation for cuts alive before the year ends. We can expect overnight interest rates in the money markets to converge toward the policy rate, and the market to reward liquidity. We plan to maintain the weight of interest-bearing instruments in TCB's portfolio, reduce the weight of deposits, and increase the weight of reverse repo transactions.
